State Skeet Clubs To Shoot Here In 1935

Five members of the Nevada City Skeet Club took part in the big Skeet Shoot in San Francisco yesterday. H. Teichert, R. Wright, Curtis Clark, Elmer Durbin and Myers Mobley tried their luck at the clay birds. Ronald Wright won first place in the "C" class and received a beautiful trophy, a little statue of a man pointing a gun, done in silver.

After the shoot the members enjoyed a banquet at the Hotel Whitcomb where a business meeting also took place. At this meeting Nevada county was awarded the State Skeet Shoot for 1935, and therefor officers were elected from this club. Myers Mobley was elected state president and Curtis Clark secretary-treasurer.

Milo Neuswander, of San Francisco, won the Northern State Championship score, getting 96 out of 100. It is the same score as that made by Curtis Clark, of Nevada City, last year.

Mr. Frank G. Finnegan, and Mrs. Clark and Mrs. Durbin also attended the Shoot.

The average daily attendance was very good when you consider the fact that the measles caused a large absent list for a week or more last winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Tobiassen and children with several friends enjoyed a trip to Downieville Sunday.

RATTLERS LAST SUPPER FROM CHICKS FEED PAN

Mrs. Augusta Miller, of North Bloomfield, has killed a number of rattle snakes in past years, but this season she surpassed all her records as regards to size and the number of rattles. Happening to hear her hens uttering unusual noises she stepped to her back door one day last week and observed a monster rattler apparently dining from the chicken's feed pan of skimmed milk. The chickens stood around in a a very agitated circle, expostulating as chickens will when something interrupts their feeding.

Mrs. Miller got a club and killed the snake. "The bigger they are the harder they fall," said Mrs. Miller. This snake was nearly as big around as her arm and almost four feet long, sported 12 rattles.

Archie Tindell also killed a rattler last week.

'SCOOP' THURMAN IS THIRD ENTRY FOR ASSEMBLY

Just before the closing of the time designated for filing for candidacy of office for the August primary election, Allan G. Thurman, Colfax newspaperman and publisher and former postmaster, entered his name for Assemblyman from the Sixth District, which comprises one of the largest assembly territories in the state.

Thurman filed on the Republican ticket alone and will be the third contestant in the field for Assemblyman.

Thurman, well known in Grass Valley and Nevada City through frequent visits, through his baseball connections and publisher of the paper and as a Colfax Lions club member ,declared yesterday that he declined to enter the contest previously at the solicitation of friends, but gave way to the pleadings of a group from Colfax, Auburn, Roseville and Lincoln and quickly qualified.

On the last day in which nominating petitions can be filed legally, Saturday, June 23, Cecil Edmunds, of Truckee, filed his papers with County Clerk McCormack, in which he announces his candidacy for assemblyman for this district, now held by Jesse Mayo of Angels Camp. He filed in both Democratic and Republican columns. Edmunds formerly owned the Truckee Republican.

Congressman Englebright filed his nomination papers through the Nevada county Clerk's office, qualifying his candidacy for Republican, Democratic and Progressive parties. He is unopposed.

Candidates for seats on the Democratic Central Committee of this county are: F. G. Finnegan, S. Lee Leiter, Vincent Foley, W. A. Maguire, C .H. Barker, Thos. A. Leary, Hugh Grant, John J. Looser, A. W. McGagin, F. O. Eldridge, Harry I. Twitchell, John T. Hennessy, Al I. Richlin, and Roy L. Terrell.

HUGHES MINE

The Hughes mine, near Downieville, that is being reopened by the Edghill Mining Company, is being rapidly put into shape and will soon be one of the big producers of that district. M. E. Pope is superintendent.

ARGONAUT RELICS EXHIBITED AT PUBLIC LIBRARY

A visit to the exhibit of antiques being collected by the local Native Daughters in the lower story of the library, revealed many interesting articles, among them being an old vase purchased by Joseph Snyder 90 years ago; a ticket of 1856 for a Pioneer Circus, the benefit circus being given for those who suffered severe losses in a terrible fire that season; a hand made tiny shoe from the old Hegarty store in Moores Flat; small gold scales of John D. Jenkins, store keeper of Nevada City in the eary 50's; crimping machine, owned by Louie Lutz, from a shoe shop, used in 1860. It has gone through a couple of fires; section of first fire hose used in Nevada City; large scrap book of funeral notices; picture of Nevada City in 1857 by Mrs. Rudolph, first woman photographer in California; two odd old Florence sewing machines; a view of street showing. Blazes corner where Congressman Englebright's office now stands, the streets were planked and the court house much as it appears today.

Mrs. Miles Coughlin should receive much praise for her hard efforts to make the exhibit interesting and all careful labeling.

VETERAN OF WORLD WAR COMMITS SUICIDE

CAMPTONVILLE, June 21.—E. H. Ricketta, who committed suicide Monday in a ward at the Nevada County Hospital, by hanging himself with a rope made from a bed sheet, came into this section about three years ago, building himself a small cabin on the Cunningham property in Celestial Valley, Yuba county. He was a World War veteran, and suffered from shell shock. He claimed to be a barber by trade.

He was a native of Georgia, and 47 years of age. Nothing is known of his relatives.

Holmes Funeral Home had charge of the funeral.

This gripping story from the pen of the most widely read of all writers of Western fiction will be published serially in these columns. Do not miss a single chapter.

BREESE FINDS FISHERMAN CENSUS RISING AT LAKE

Fred Breese, dean of all local fishermen, left Nevada City last Saturday for a week's fishing trip at Sardine Lake, above Sierra City. Mrs. Breese who was with him recently when they came upon the immense black bear, declined to take another trip into the woods.

When Mr. Breese arose early Sunday morning and started fishing, he soon commenced to find fishermen, until he feels he saw fully 1,000 about the lake. At the end of the day Mr. Breese stated that he thought about seven fish had been caught. A heavy wind came up and blew high waves over the dam at the lower end of the lake. Strange to say, he got homesick for Nevada City and came home last evening without his usual catch.

NEVADA COUNTY REUNION HELD IN LOS ANGELES

By MRS. SARAH BRIMOND

Former residents of Nevada county, held their annual reunion and picnic in Sycamore Park, near Los Angeles, June 17. It was a day long to be remembered. Old timers, their children and their grandchildren, numbering 300 were gathered there.

The day was spent in renewing old acquaintances and visiting with each other. Lunch was served, and what a lunch it was! Nevada county certainly raised some good cooks.

A splendid program was arranged by Hazel Bawden Allen. Two beautiful solos were sung by Joe Champion. The Zenda Dance Cafe orchestra of Los Angeles, rendered musical numbers. Sheriff Eugene Biscaluz, of Los Angeles gave a short address on patriotism and told of the the wonderful reception accorded the Native Sons in Grass Valley last year. The orchestra members produced two vaudeville numbers. Will Prisk, of the Long Beach Telegram, told of a recent visit to Grass Valley and the progress Nevada county is making. Frank Sirard gave a very amusing sketch of his boyhood days in Sierra county.

A poem composed by Mr. M. Morley, of Rough and Ready, dealing with a wedding in the early Fifties won much applause. A little tot gave a reading. Joe Champion sang "The End of a Perfect Day," and it was a perfect day. All returned to their homes glad of the honor and privilege of having lived in Nevada county.

Represented at the picnic were: Grass Valley, North Bloomfield, North San Juan, Nevada City, Rough and Ready and other places of which I did not get the names. Superior Judge Call, of Los Angeles, made a few remarks.

This report is sent the Nugget to show that we still have a great love for our former home—our childhood home.

AMPLIFIER WILL ANNOUNCE FLOATS

All officials of the 4th of July Celebration are quite enthusiastic over the support they are receiving and the interest being taken in preparing the floats and different entries. The response of Grass Valley is also greatly appreciated in coming forward with so many floats.

On the evening of the 3rd. an amateur vaudeville entertainment is to be given.

A new feature is being added this year, a large amplifier which will announce the name of the donor and what each float represents as they pass a certain point.

The CCC boys are taking a keen interest in their float which is to represent 1849 and 1934.

COMPLAINT FILED ON ALLEGED ATTEMPT THEFT

A felony complaint was filed today by F. A. Sullivan, of the Idaho-Maryland mine, in the Grass Valley Justice court against Lee Wyatt for attempted burglary alleged to have been committed Saturday night at ten minutes to twelve. Wyatt was caught entering the Dry House at the mine where the men on shift had their clothes hung up.

Two Sierra City Mines Are Sold for $200,000

A sale of mining property that will be of considerable interest locally, was completed Friday with the signing of papers by Mrs. Richard Phelan, in which she sold the Sacred Mount and Butte Saddle mining properties near Sierra City to the Edghill Mining Company. On good authority it is learned that the purchase price was $200,000, and a cash consideration of $10,000 has already been paid.

M. E. Pope, superintendent for the Edghill Mining Company, which is at present operating the Hughes mine near Downieville, stated active work on the two properties would start immediately with the installation of a 100 horse power Diesel engine and compressor for driving a tunnel 1200 feet to crosscut from the Sacred Mount to tap the Butte Saddle workings.

A 100 ton capacity mill and concentration equipment has already been shipped to be installed at the Sacred Mount, Mr. Pope stated. He expects to have three shifts at work within a very short time.

Both properties are well known as early producers and the present owners are well satisfied with the thorough examination they made of the two properties.

THIS BULL SNAKE IS EARNING HIS KEEP

A big brown Bull Snake, five or six feet long, with a thick body and a stubby tail, comes to the Cowles home daily for his breakfast, and he gets it. Every morning the snake shows up in a most friendly manner, and glides around the kitchen floor until he receives some attention. Charlie feeds it scraps. After his breakfast the snake plays around for a while in the house then glides off into the yard, he disappears and reappears, but always comes back for breakfast. Charlie feels that friend snake earns his board by keeping rattlers away, devouring rodents and frightening hawks, all of which are a menace to the little chicks.

ARCHIE I. ROWEN IS CANDIDATE FOR TREASURER

Archie I. Rowen, exceptionally well trained young business man of Grass Valley, on Saturday announced his candidacy for the office of County Treasurer and Tax Collector. Mr. Rowen, since coming to Grass Valley nearly two years ago, has been affiliated with the Nevada City-Grass Valley Ski club, the Grass Valley Chamber of Commerce, and the Lions Club, of Grass Valley.

Of sterling character, he has often demonstrated his public spirited willingness to put his shoulder to the wheel in promoting those movements that make for community progress.

He has had wide business experience, is a trained accountant, and has these qualities of integrity, industry, and personality that fit him well for the duties of the office which he seeks.

Rowen has a host of friends in Nevada City, Grass Valley, and the mining communities throughout the county, who are working for his election. In event he be chosen by the electorate to fill the office for which he is a candidate, he promises an efficient and economical administration of its duties.

BLUE BIRD CAMPFIRE GIRLS HEAR FLAG TALK

The Bluebird group of the Campfire girls held a fine meeting at the home of Joan Grant on Broad Street between ten and 11 o'clock. Merilyn Pierce, the president, called the meeting to order and presided during the program. Joan Grant, leader, gave a talk on the flag. After telling about the flag there was a group discussion and questions and answers. The girls learned the meaning of the flag, discussed respect for it and learned the proper care of the flag; the correct way to hang it, to lower it and to fold it.

Mrs. Nat Jackson gave the girls a most interesting health talk and held their closests attention. Mrs. Jackson, a graduate of Mt. Holyoke College, formerly had charge of the children's department in a New York City library and understands the child interest.

COMMUNITY IS URGED TO BACK 4TH FESTIVITY

Nevada City,
June 25, 1934.

To The People of Nevada City:

The splendid custom, observed for so many years, of Grass Valley and this city alterating in the public celebration of our National Anniversary, is worthy of perpetuation. The spirit of neighborly friendliness and cooperation which this custom inspires cannot be anything but beneficial to both communities.

This year is our turn, the county seat of Nevada county, to hold the celebration, and our Sister City has taken hold of the work with marked enthusiasm. She is going to do her level best to make the occasion one never to be forgotten, showing her appreciation of the helping hand so freely given by Nevada City in the past.

Last year was Grass Valley's turn to hold the celebration and no doubt you all recall the great success and the honor reflected on the good people of dear old Nevada county. On that occasion Nevada City stepped vigorously into the ring to assist our Sister City and left no stone unturned to make the event a success. She was warm-hearted in her support, furnished a division of admirable floats, and her citizens attended in large numbers.

It behooves each and every citizen of our town to step up enthusiastically and render their hearty support, not by mere words but by our acts in order that the celebration of this year be a great success, boom the event as an occasion for the home-coming of our absent citizens, and lend your presence and hearty cooperation to the celebration of 1934. "NEVADA CITY KNOWS HOW —PROVE IT TO THE WORLD."

Respectfully submitted,
E. M. KILROY.

FOREST SERVICE RESPONDS TO CALLS

Reports of fires from four widely separated areas came to State Forest Ranger William F. Sharp, Saturday and he immediately dispatched his crews to take care of them. One report came from the Hills Flat area known as Goat Hill, a five acre grass ire was burning in the Willow Valley section. Fifty acres of grass and brush were burning over on the Dow ranch, near Newtown.

Sunday they had several more calls for small fires, one, covering about a ten acre area east of Toll, one at Culbertson Lake, near Lake Bowman. The State Department took care of the one at American Hill.

Fortunately your Forest Service is large enough to take care of these scattered fires, but these small fires are a tremendous menace as any one of them might become a great fire, so we must constantly remember to obey all the regulations to prevent them.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Harris have as visitors here sister and husband, Dr. and Mrs. J. P. Truax of Lompoc, California. Dr. Truax and wife have been on a vacation tour of Washington and Oregon and will spend this week here visiting.

Tugwell Confirmed by Senate Despite Bitter Attacks—Darrow Board Assails Johnson—President Roosevelt's Plans for Social Regeneration.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© by Western Newspaper Union.

REXFORD GUY TUGWELL'S appearance before the senate agriculture committee to be quizzed as to his fitness for the position of undersecretary of agriculture was rather farcical, even though it brought on heated encounters among the members of the committee. The senators aired their own views freely, but learned almost nothing concerning those of Mr. Tugwell. He did tell them he believed the Constitution was flexible enough to take care of any necessary economic changes; that he was opposed to the adoption of Soviet planning by America, and that he thought his experience on his father's farm and his research qualified him for the position to which the President had appointed him. Finally the committee reported the nomination favorably, the only two opposing votes being those of "Cotton Ed" Smith of South Carolina and Henry D. Hatfield of West Virginia.

R. G. Tugwell

The action of the committee assured Tugwell's confirmation by the senate, but the debate on the floor was unexpectedly long and the attacks on Tugwell were outspoken. Senator Schall of Minnesota, for instance, said:

"Agriculture demands and already has experiment stations dealing in actual crops, live stock, and markets. It wants no 'bold experiments in collectivism' by a self-styled philosopher who functions like a three card monte sharp who jumps upon a box with three shells and a pea and who entertains the public with his cry, 'Now you see it and now you don't. Who is the next gent?'

"Tugwell's general denial, and his specific denials, in the light of his associates in the field of political writing, are absolutely worthless. They are an insult to an intelligent jury. He insults the United States senate in order to gain a high office from which he can preach 'collectivism' as a substitute for American institutions and the Constitution."

WHILE the delegates of the steel workers' unions were gathering in Pittsburgh to vote on the threatened strike, President Roosevelt and his advisers brought forward a plan for an emergency law designed to avert the walkout. It was admittedly a temporary expedient to give the President an effective agency for the consideration of industrial disputes arising during the life of the NRA.

Under the new bill's terms, boards selected by the President would be empowered to order and conduct an election, by a secret ballot, to determine "by what person or persons or organizations" employees may desire to be represented in negotiations under the collective bargaining features of the national recovery act.

The proposed boards also would have the authority to order production of pertinent documents and witnesses to give testimony under oath, and their orders would be enforceable by any United States court of competent jurisdiction, similar to like privileges enjoyed by the federal trade commission. Vested with authority to prescribe their own rules and regulations, the boards would be armed with a penalty clause in the new law, setting $1,000 fine or a year imprisonment, or both, for violation of their decrees.

IN ITS second report to the President the national recovery review board, headed by Clarence Darrow, loosed another blast at Administrator Johnson and in effect recommended his removal as head of the NRA. The board said Johnson had given the recovery program an un-American and dictatorial tinge that handicapped it in the war on depression; that he has arbitrarily decreed life and death for industries, and that by arbitrary modifications of codes he has helped big business concerns to oppress their smaller competitors.

"The rule of the military commander is totally unsuited to the genius, habits, traditions, or psychology of the American people, and wholly ineffectual in meeting the present national crisis," the board concluded.

The second Darrow report covered the retail dry goods, warehousing, lumber, cement, retail food, boot and shoe, electrical manufacturing, bedding, petroleum, coffee, plumbing fixture, embroidery, and lead pencil codes. Complaints against the warehousing, electrical manufacturing, and embroidery codes were dismissed as without foundation. But in the other codes the board claimed to find oppression of small businesses or consumers.

SECRETARY OF STATE HULL sent to Great Britain another note concerning the war debt, bluntly refuting the arguments of the British government, saying it was up to the debtor to offer propositions in such cases, and intimating that an arrangement for part payment in goods might be possible. However, when June 15, the day for installments, came, Uncle Sam received only $166,538, which was the full sum due from Finland. The larger debtors all gave notice of default, and so did most of the others. Czechoslovakia suggested a readjustment to permit it to pay in goods and service.

In Berlin the Reichsbank declared a six-months moratorium on its foreign obligations, these including the Dawes and Young loans. No cash transfers will be made by the bank from July 1 to December 31, 1934.

SENATOR ARTHUR ROBINSON of Indiana, who was renominated by the Republicans, will be opposed at the polls next fall by Sherman Minton, the selection of the Democratic state convention. Mr. Minton, a World war veteran, is now public counselor for the public service commission of the state. His nomination was a victory for Governor McNutt over the faction led by R. Earl Peters, former state chairman.

IN THE Democratic run-off primary in Alabama, Former Gov. Bibb Graves won the nomination for governor and goes back to the executive office which he held from January, 1927, to January, 1931.

Judge James E. Horton, who presided in the second trial of Heywood Patterson, one of the nine negro defendants in the "Scottsboro case," and then set aside a jury verdict of death, ran more than 2,500 behind A. A. Griffith of Cullman. George Huddleston of Birmingham retained his seat as congressman from the Ninth district, but Congressman Miles C. Allgood of the Fifth district was beaten by Maj. Joe Starnes.

IMMEDIATE relief from distress and recovery of business prosperity fall far short of President Roosevelt's plans for regeneration of the nation. This was revealed in his special message to congress which told of the plans and recommendations he would submit to the next congress. He asked for no present legislation, but gave notice of the social experiments he proposes to begin next winter.

President Roosevelt

The message discussed the three factors of housing, land and resource planning and old age and unemployment insurance.

Expressing satisfaction over progress in relieving industry, agriculture, and unemployment, the President, asserting his right to chart social reforms, declared, "It is childish to speak of recovery first and reconstruction afterward."

Taking up the housing problem, he said millions of dollars had already been provided to improve living conditions, and voiced the hope that with passage of his housing program private capital would be stimulated to widen the scope of home building.

Discussing planned control of the land, he declared that hundreds of thousands of families now live "where there is no reasonable prospect of a living in the years to come."

Sounding the failure of the government thus far to create a "national policy" for the development of land and water resources, Mr. Roosevelt indicated his intention of providing such a policy, and for the transferring to new lands of "those people who cannot make a living in their present positions."

Outlining his views on providing security against unemployment and old age, Mr. Roosevelt said he was seeking a "sound means" which he could recommend to provide an immediate safeguard against these "hazards and vicissitudes of life."

WHEN President Roosevelt signed the tariff bargaining bill he acquired authority to negotiate reciprocal trade treaties without senate approval and to increase or decrease tariff rates by as much as 50 per cent in order to stimulate foreign commerce. This policy of swapping reductions, the government believes, will result in great benefit to our foreign trade, and at the same time will give adequate protection to industry. Already nearly thirty foreign nations are lined up, awaiting an opportunity to negotiate reciprocal treaties.

MAX BAER of California brought the world's heavyweight title back to America by soundly whipping Primo Carnera, the huge Italian, in New York. The fight was the most exciting one seen in this country for a long time. Scheduled for fifteen rounds, it ended in the eleventh when the referee declared a technical knockout and awarded the victory to Baer. Carnera was game to the end. Thirteen times he went to the canvas, yet he was advancing against the retreating Baer during the greater part of the contest. Carnera went into the ring weighing 263 pounds, and Baer tipped the scales at 210.

CONGRESS completed action on the communications bill and it was handed to the President for his signature. This new law puts an end to the federal radio commission and creates a new board of seven members known as the federal communications commission that not only takes over the duties of the radio board but also all control that has been exercised by the interstate commerce commission over telegraphic and telephonic communications.

As set forth in the law, its enactment is for the purpose of regulating interstate and foreign commerce in communication by wire and radio to make available, so far as possible, to all the people of the United States a rapid, efficient, nation-wide and world-wide wire and radio communication service with adequate facilities, at reasonable charges, for the purpose of national defense and for the purpose of securing a more effective execution of this policy by centralizing authority heretofore granted by law to several agencies; and by granting additional authority with respect to interstate and foreign commerce in wire and radio communication.

A significant new provision which the bill carries into law is the assertion of full control over all wire and radio communications by the government in case of war or "public peril." Under this section the President has authority to take over all wire and radio offices and stations with just compensation to persons entitled thereto.

LARGELY through the efforts of Norman Davis, American ambassador at large, the European statesmen at Geneva were persuaded to drop their quarreling and adopt a mild compromise resolution that prolonged the life of the disarmament conference. Great Britain and France agreed upon a plan, based on the return of Germany to the conference, and the aid of Italy was enlisted. It was arranged that Chancellor Hitler should go to Venice and that Premier Mussolini should fly to that city to confer with his fellow dictator, whom he had never met. Later Louis Barthou, French foreign minister, is expected to go to Rome for a talk with Mussolini in which the misunderstandings between their countries may be ironed out.

Premier Mussolini

Mussolini and Hitler were to discuss European policies generally, and, specifically, the German claims to full armament and the Austrian question, involving Nazi propaganda in the latter country.

This Anglo-French compromise was a diplomatic setback for Russia, but the Soviet republic countered with the announcement that it had been recognized by Czechoslovakia and Rumania. Recognition by Jugoslavia was expected to follow shortly. Maxim Litvinov's announcement was taken to mean that the Russians intend to go ahead with their policy of encircling Germany.

The recognition was effected by an exchange of letters between Litvinov and Dr. Edward Benes, foreign minister of Czechoslovakia, and Nicholas Titulescu, foreign minister of Rumania. After suggesting an early exchange of ministers, which will assure that relations between their countries "will always remain friendly and correct," each of these letters adds the phrase, "our peoples will collaborate in the future to maintain the peace of the world."

German papers agree a new chapter in relations between Soviet Russia and the powers of southeastern Europe has been opened. It is expected the next step probably will be the conclusion of a commercial agreement between the little entente and Moscow, one of the purposes being to minimize the effect of Soviet dumping of lumber and cereals in the entente nations. Nonaggressions and mutual assistance pacts are said to be in the background.

A committee of the disarmament conference had under consideration the matter of guarantees for any convention which may be agreed upon; but when the question was submitted to the Japanese delegate he said his government could not consent to guarantees without reservations. Thereupon the Russian delegate said the Soviet government would not accept any such agreement that was not signed by Japan.

EVEN the Democrats in congress are not boasting openly of their success in passing the bill for a census of the unemployed, and many of them voted against it or were absent when it came up for final passage. That it was designed mainly to give jobs for the faithful at the expense of the national treasury was clear, for the census takers are not to get their jobs until after the November congressional elections. Then they will receive $2 a day for a long period, obtaining answers to an elaborate questionnaire.

DROUTH-STRICKEN regions of the Middle West were blessed with soaking rains, and hope was held out for forage crops and corn. The earlier crops, however, are ruined over most of the area. Secretary Wallace, after a trip through the "dry" states, described the drouth as a "tragedy" for the farmers who are suffering from its ravages, but a possible future "blessing for the country as a whole."

OLIN DUTRA, professional of a California country club, now wears the crown of open golf champion of the United States. He won the title by shooting a 293 for 72 holes.

Merging 35 departments of county government into seven in the interest of economy is advocated in Los Angeles county in a report adopted by the Los Angeles county council of the American Legion on file with the Los Angeles board of supervisors. The report was prepared after a study made by the subcommittee of governmental affairs relative to the 1934-35 general county budget.

Coins of all denominations are being crudely made over camp fires in the jungles of river camps in many California counties by unemployed men or transients, according to Thomas B. Foster, chief of the secret service in San Francisco. After the coin has been rubbed to give the appearance of having been used, the operators sally forth to the nearest towns to make a clean-up. Half dollars are the most common of the bogus coins.

California, taking a step from the chain store system, moved recently toward forming a chain of world fairs for 1938 and 1939. County officials meeting in Los Angeles endorsed preliminary proposals for three world fairs during the two years and named a committee to help promote the plan. The three fairs would be held in Los Angeles, San Diego and San Francisco. They would commemorate the completion of Boulder Dam, All-American Canal, Los Angeles union station, and two San Francisco bay bridges.

Warden James A. Johnston has announced that Alcatraz Island, historic fortress in San Francisco bay, will be ready to receive prisoners this week. The first of the dangerous criminals—gangsters, kidnapers and killers—who are to be placed in the penitentiary, some of them for life, will arrive during the week, the warden has been informed. Details concerning their transfers from other federal prisons are being withheld.

Despite protests, Mayor Franks of Stockton delivered the address of welcome to 250 delegates to the California annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church recently. A protest signed by 45 ministers against Frank's appearance owing to assertions made recently by the publication of the Stockton Municipal Ownership League claimed he had taken out permits for work in gambling places as an electrical contractor.

Primary drought areas in California, listed by the state emergency relief administrator for Washington officials are Kern, Kings, Tulare, Fresno, San Diego, Riverside, Los Angeles and San Bernardino counties. Those listed as secondary relief areas are San Luis Obispo, Monterey, Santa Clara, Merced, Madera, Santa Barbara and San Benito. No drought crisis is believed to exist in the northern counties.

It is expected some form of relief will be given California areas in need from the $525,000,000 appropriation made by Congress.

CHAPTER XII

The board of supervisors granted the petition unanimously and amidst cheers and rejoicings. Babson's speech, in rebuttal to Gagan's, proved to be the masterpiece of his career. He read to the meeting the law under which the district proposed to operate—read it right out of the Code of Civil Procedure, too—and pooh-pooed the idea of a slick metropolitan lawyer trying to frighten honest and intelligent men with crazy bugaboos of unconstitutional law that was and for some years had been embodied in the code. "If this law was unconstitutional," he yelled, "it's unconstitutionality would have been discovered before the bill was even submitted to the legislature; and if it hadn't been discovered then the legislature, a majority of whom are practicing attorneys, would have discovered it; and even if the legislature had, unbelievably, failed to discover it, the supreme court, whose duty it is to pass upon the constitutionality of our state laws, would long since have discovered it. Pooh-pooh and a couple of what-nots for the mighty Mr. Gagan! We are not to be frightened by men of straw."

The project moved forward without delay. Sixty days from the date of the approval of the petition by the board of supervisors the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district had come into legal existence, by a very substantial majority of the residents in the area to be irrigated. Silas Babson, tired, but happy and triumphant, was its president, Henry Rookby, who owned ten acres in the district, was the secretary, and the Bank of Valley Center was the depositary of the funds of the district.

Within two weeks after the district had come into official being, the state water commission obligingly allocated to it the flood waters of Eden Valley creek. A bond issue was got out within a week; within two weeks the state board certification committee had certified the bonds as legal investment for trust companies and savings banks and, by unanimous vote. Silas Babson was given the job of disposing of them to the highest bidder. A New York house wired in a bid of ninety-one, and after devoting a month to the task Babson decided this offer was one point higher than he could secure locally, so the district closed on the offer and, with the receipt of the money, proceeded at once to spend it.

Although Babson took measures to apprize himself of the return of Nate Tichenor to Eden Valley, his scouts brought him no news of the latter's arrival, although as a matter of fact Tichenor had returned some four months after his departure. He came in over the mountains to the south in a four-passenger cabin plane and landed in the meadow just below the Kershaw ranch-house. Lorry was in his arms before he was half way up to the house.

"Well, I'm all cleaned up in the East," he told her. "How far have you progressed in the settlement of your father's estate?"

"All ready to close as soon as I can find the money to pay the state and federal estate taxes. They aren't nearly so much as I had feared they would be. The cattle, of course, were appraised at the low price existing on the day of father's death—and beef is up to nine and a half in the ranch now and should be twelve cents within a year, I'm told by my cattle brokers. And the federal tax appraiser decided the land has been greatly depressed in value by reason of the diversion of the water to Forlorn Valley."

"Dear Little Outlaw, I Love You So," He Murmured, and Kissed Her a Dozen Times.

"That's a favor Babson didn't realize he was going to do you. Is everything on the ranch running smoothly? Nothing coming up that Rube Tenney can't attend to?"

She nodded. "As soon as beef goes to ten cents I'll sell five thousand fat steers, pay the taxes and close the estate."

"Don't. Hold them over till spring and get eleven cents—maybe. I'll loan you the money to pay the taxes. How soon can you marry me?"

"In about three minutes, if we had a license and a preacher handy."

He glanced up at the sun. "Justice, long delayed, maketh the heart sick," he orated. "Likewise marriage—after you've made up your mind. You skip right into the house, climb into your Sunday dress, throw a few things in your old straw suitcase and meet me here in ten minutes. We've just about got time to get over the mountains and into Reno before dark. In California we have to announce our intention to get married and then wait for three days, in case we decide to change our mind. My mind is made up, so we'll take our trade to Nevada and avoid annoying delays."

"You're a man after my own heart," Lorry cried joyously, and came into his arms. He held her close, his finger under her chin, tip-tilting her sweet face toward him, the while he appraised her hungrily, comparing her with the girls of her age in the world he had known before the homing instinct had brought him back to Eden Valley. He thanked God she wasn't soft, that she had high courage, initiative, and the power of instantaneous decision in an emergency; that hers was the old, fierce, unquestioning loyalty that was his own heritage. A man could rely on her always (he told himself), know always exactly where she stood. She was incapable of fibs, evasions, or the tears that camouflage little feminine deceits. Her code was a masculine one, but of a quality rare enough in this decadent generation—the code of a gallant gentleman, plus that of the very finest of her own sex. Yes, she had character, courage, humor, self-reliance, capabilities of extreme self sacrifice, tenderness, helplessness—an angel with a touch of the devil in her. . . . Well, better a touch of the devil than a trace of the cat.

"Dear little outlaw, I love you so," he murmured, and kissed her a dozen times. "Make it snappy. Time and visibility wait for no pilot."

Half an hour later, as they roared upward in great spirals to gain altitude before crossing the mountains, they looked down on Eden Valley; to that tragic creek winding its silvery way through the green meadows, to the little black dots that were Lorry's cattle and the little white dots that were the home-made headstones, chiseled from native granite and marking the graves of all the Hensleys and Kershaws that had gone before.

"I wonder what they're thinking of—up yonder?" the girl shouted in his ear.

He pretended he did not understand her.

"I've been so busy I couldn't get started on that new house I planned," he shouted back, "but we'll tackle it the minute we get back."

So she knew he had, at last, left his dead and his old bitter memories behind him; and there, above Eden Valley, as her little hard, calloused, capable hand closed over his, she dropped hers also; she shed happy tears in the knowledge that never again would hard work, penury and loneliness be her portion. The sun was setting on Eden now, but when, for them, it should rise again on Eden, the serpent would be gone.

In June of 1927 the news spread through Forlorn Valley of the return of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Tichenor to Eden Valley. Shortly thereafter huge trucks laden with lumber and building materials came through Valley Center from Gold Run, bound for the old Circle K ranch. Immediately Crenshaw, the manager of the Valley Center lumber yard, motored up to the Circle K to see Nate Tichenor and ask for a share of this new business. He had been received courteously and told that no orders for lumber or building material could be given him because Silas Babson was one of his heaviest stockholders.

When Crenshaw returned to Valley Center he informed the local chamber of commerce of the projected outlay of a great deal of money in Eden Valley. Nate Tichenor and his wife had merged their ranches, the old Bar H headquarters were to be razed and the old Circle K log ranch-house was to be given over to Rube Tenney and his family, after the Tichenors had erected on the Circle K a country home that was to cost not less than a hundred thousand dollars. There were stables and kennels to be erected also, grounds to be laid out and flowers planted. The lunatic Tichenor was even going to build a nine-hole golf course and a huge swimming pool. Crenshaw thought that the payroll for labor necessitated in these operations should go to Valley Center, so the vice president of the chamber of commerce called upon Tichenor to suggest it.

"Forlorn Valley in general and Valley Center in particular wishes to forget the past and be friendly with you, Mr. Tichenor," he stated. "As proof of that feeling I call your attention to the fact that we gave you the use of the freshet waters of Eden Valley creek this spring when we found we couldn't use them ourselves, owing to the necessity for concreting our diversion canal. We didn't have to do that, but we desired to make a friendly gesture."

"My dear man, I ordered those floodgates opened myself and I had men guarding them with rifles so that nobody would close them until our lands had had their annual soaking. That's the sort of friendly gesture I made to Forlorn Valley. I was on my honeymoon at the time and didn't want to bother with the law, so I just went back to the old Eden Valley custom. It worked. And I'll engage no labor from Valley Center or Forlorn Valley. I do not like anybody in that section of the county. And here's another message you can take back with you; within two years I'll own every acre of Forlorn Valley that is included in the irrigation district; I'll fence it and run cattle over it. At least the wells will supply drinking water for my cattle. And when the farmers in the district have been dispossessed there will be no further necessity for the thriving town of Valley Center, so it and its chamber of commerce will disappear; Valley Center will then be a ghost town, inhabited by ghosts."

The vice president of the chamber of commerce was irritated but he was also amused. "Is there no way in which we can escape this horrible fate that awaits us?" he pleaded in mock distress.

"Yes, there is," Tichenor replied seriously. "Get rid of that buzzard, Babson, and start doing your own thinking. Show an inclination to be fair and I'll meet you two-thirds of the way toward an amicable adjustment of this water war. Continue to permit Babson and his paid newspaper to print lies about us and ridicule us, and I'll smash you. And after I've smashed you Ill buy up the pieces and own the district. I tell you, when I get through with the state of California that state will be out of the business of giving away water it does not own and that document Babson got from the state water commission will be perfectly worthless."

His visitor gazed upon Tichenor humorously. "What a long tail our cat's got," he murmured.

"Oh, I'm only a common little bobcat now," Tichenor replied easily. "Wait until I develop into a tiger—and then watch my tail swish!"

CHAPTER XIII

The Forlorn Valley Irrigation district proceeded at once to the task of concreting its huge diversion canal. The job was completed by November first. Almost from the beginning the diversion canal ran half full and Lake Babson commenced to take form. The snowfall was unusually heavy that year also, but spring came early and the run-off due to the melting snow commenced about the middle of January.

This was the season of overflow in Eden Valley creek, the season of God's gift of free irrigation to the Circle K and the Bar H, and Nate Tichenor, watching the water's rise, knew that in another twenty-four hours the freshet would be on, so he and Rube Tenney and half a dozen armed men opened the floodgates, in defiance of the ditch-tender's protest and the flood roared on down Eden Valley. The ditch-tender immediately mounted his horse and rode down to Valley Center to report this act of vandalism to Silas Babson, who motored into Gold Run and, as president of the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district, petitioned the judge of the county superior court for an order restraining Nathan Tichenor, et al., from interfering with the orderly diversion of the flood waters of Eden Valley creek to the canal of the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district.

To Babson's vast amazement the judge declined to issue the restraining order. "I hold, Babson," he informed the latter, "that the law under which the state water commission has been empowered to allocate to nonriparian owners the flood or waste waters of riparian owners, is unconstitutional and that, hence, Forlorn Valley has no legal right to the flood waters of Eden Valley creek."

"Why hasn't our Supreme court declared the law unconstitutional?"

"Because nobody has carried a water fight up to the Supreme court."

A week had gone by since Nate Tichenor and his men had opened the flood-gates up in the Handle and as yet Babson had not been able to secure legal relief. Upon his return to Gold Run, therefore, he called upon the sheriff of the county and requested that official to take half a dozen of his deputies and guard the employees of the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district against attack by Nathan Tichenor et al, when the former closed the floodgates in defiance of Tichenor's dictum. In the interest of peace the sheriff consented and the following day the gates were closed without interference from Nate Tichenor and his men. Indeed, not one of them appeared to protest the closing of the gates.

The next morning Nate Tichenor dropped in at the Bank of Valley Center and said to Babson:

"I merely dropped in to tell you, Babson, that while you were scurrying around a whole week seeking an injunction against my wife and me you couldn't get, our lands had a grand soaking from that week's overflow. We would have liked another week of it, but when you brought the sheriff and his deputies around I concluded it was the part of wisdom to be satisfied with the water we had already received. But as summer advances I warn you we'll have to have our legal share of that water and if we do not get it I'm going to put a couple of hundred pounds of dynamite under that concrete diversion dam of yours and blow it out."

"If you do you'll go to the pen," Babson warned.

"Only my kind forbearance has kept you out of it. Do not forget Pitt River Charley. You do not know where he is but I do. I may bring him back to testify against you."

"You couldn't convict me."

"Perhaps not, but I can shake public confidence in you, you smug hypocrite. You realize, of course, that when the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district was formed and a deed of trust on all of the lands embraced in the district was given, with a San Francisco trust company as trustee, to secure the bond issue the district floated, all of the first mortgages and deeds of trust on lands within the district given to your bank to secure prior loans have now become second liens against those lands. You realize, do you, that if the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district should go bust the foreclosure of the deed of trust given by the district will automatically wipe out the second liens held by your bank?"

Traveling Goat-Herding Dog Always Welcomed by Ranchmen of Rio Grande

The overlord of the goat ranches of the Big Bend region of the upper Rio Grande border is a wandering dog which first made his appearance hereabouts several years ago. Where the dog came from is a mystery. The first time he was seen in the remote section was when he showed up one morning at the goat corral on a ranch near La Jitas crossing of the river, notes a Terlingua, Texas, correspondent in the New York Times.

The dog took charge of the flock when the animals were turned out of the corral and all day long he herded them like a veteran. He was so efficient in the work that the Mexican herder left the flock entirely in the dog's charge. After staying at the Hernandez ranch for a few weeks, Pancho, as the dog was called, disappeared and appeared next at another goat ranch 15 miles down the Rio Grande. Pancho again took carge of the flock of goats and soon came to be what was apparently a fixture in each day's herding routine. Tiring of this particular job, the dog made his way to another ranch where he assumed full leadership in taking care of the goats.

The wandering of Pancho has continued year after year until he is now known to ranchmen up and down the river for a hundred miles. He is always accorded a warm welcome when he arrives at a ranch, and his faithful herding of the flocks is so well recognized that the goats always are placed in his full care. Pancho is an adept in protecting the kids and even full-grown goats from attacks by wolves and Mexican panthers. He has to his credit many victorious encounters with these predatory pests.

Useful Teacher

It is said of Gladstone, the famous English statesman, that he taught his fellowmen and women how to live, and when he could no longer do this he was teaching them how to die.

Getting the Best From Rice

One of the Most Successful Methods Is That of the Chinese, Which Calls for More Water Than Is Generally Used in America.

Do you know how to cook rice? Of course. I mean cook it really well? Any one can put rice in water and get it soft enough to eat, but when you finish cooking it, is yours dry and flaky? In other words, are you making the most of it?

There really is no one best way to cook rice. I have had several different recipes a la Chinese given to me, always with the statement, "This is the only way to cook rice well." These recipes, however, differ greatly both in the amount of water which should be used and also the question as to whether rice should be boiled rapidly or slowly. I have been most successful with the Chinese method, which calls for twice as much water as rice, and which directs that the rice shall be boiled but ten minutes and then put over hot water for about 15 minutes. I find the tall top of a double boiler the most satisfactory utensil.

This method, by the way, is quite different from that advised by a Chinese cook book which has recently been published. It suggests soaking the rice over night, then draining it and cooking it in boiling water for 20 minutes. Let me quote one sentence from the book, which gives an idea of the many ways in which rice may be prepared: "In China we have three religions, but a hundred dishes we may make from rice." Here is another quotation which might be applied to rice cookery: "Fuel may be cheap, but you need not burn the bottom of your pot."

To get back from China to America. There are two other ways which I like very much for cooking rice. One is to put in what is known as a rice ball—which looks like two sieves put together. The ball is put in a kettle of boiling water and when the rice is tender it may be lifted out and drained at the same time. The other method I like is what is known as steaming. I use three times as much milk as rice and put them together in a double boiler with a little salt, which we always add in whatever method we use. It takes about three-quarters of an hour to steam rice.

After the rice is cooked you can do all sorts of things with it besides serving it with meat as is so often done. I usually try to have gravy when I serve rice instead of potatoes. It can be combined with highly flavored foods, such as tomatoes, onion, cheese, leftover meat and fish.

It also forms a foundation for any number of interesting desserts. Steamed in milk, it is delicious with shaved maple sugar and crushed sweetened berries or fruit. If you want a more elaborate dessert you may add whipped cream, fruit, plus a little gelatin, to the rice, and mold it.

You may use brown rice or wild rice in place of the familiar white variety. The method of cooking is the same for all but both the brown and wild types require longer cooking time. These types of rice are especially good with meat and game.

Chinese Method of Cooking Rice.

1 cup rice
½ teaspoon salt
2 cups cold water

Add rice and salt to the water, cover and bring to a boil in top part of double boiler. Let boil ten minutes. By that time the water should be absorbed. Then set the top part of the double boiler over hot water 10 to 15 minutes. Remove the cover a few minutes before serving, to let out steam.

Swiss Rice.

1 cup rice
3 to 3½ cups hot milk
1 teaspoon salt.
1 cup cream, whipped
½ teaspoon vanilla
1 cup drained shredded pineapple or other fruit

Add salt to milk. Steam rice in milk over boiling water 30 to 45 minutes until tender. Cool. Add vanilla, fold in half of whipped cream, add fruit and pour into pudding dish. Chill and garnish with remaining whipped cream.

Rice With Tomatoes and Ham.

1 onion
2 cups cooked ham
2 cups boiled rice
2 cups cooked tomatoes
Salt
Paprika
¾ cup buttered crumbs

Chop onion and ham very fine. Add rice and tomatoes seasoned with salt and paprika. Mix thoroughly, put in a baking dish, cover with buttered crumbs and bake for 15 minutes in a hot oven (450 degrees F.).

UTILITY TAXES TAKE BIG DROP

SACRAMENTO, June 25.—Climaxing 24 years of public utility taxation on a gross receipts basis, the State Board of Equaliztaion announces today that California will derive $1,143,934.66 less this year than in 1933 from this source for the general support of the state government.

Insurance companies taxed on their gross premiums with off-sets for real property taxes paid locally, have also reported a decline in business so that the state revenues from this source have shrunk $563,815.74 under last year's figure, according to the Board's statement.

When the losses in the revenues from the public utility and insurance taxes are consolidated, they reveal that the deficit in the state treasury will be further augmented by a decline in current general fund taxes amounting to $1,707,750.40. Commenting on this situation, the Board points out:

TAX BURDEN INCREASED

"It is evident that business conditions during the past year have been such as to make it impossible for the state to hold its own in revenues without increasing the tax burden on those types of enterprises subject to special levies for state purposes.

"At the last session, the legislature voted to increase the rate of tax on the gross receipts of gas and electric companies from 7½ to 9 per cent, and on telephone companies from 5½ to 5 and 3-4 per cent. These higher rates have been in effect for 1933 and 1934 as applied to gross receipts for the calendar year 1932 and 1933, respectively. No further increases were given legislative approval.

"Without the sales tax, it is clear that the state's financial structure would have become paralyzed. The steady decline in utility and insurance taxes would have produced fiscal chaos.

"As a result of the adoption of the Riley-Stwart plan at the special election a year ago, the assessment just made by the state board marks the end of gross receipts taxation of utilities and the corresponding withdrawal of their operative property from local tax rolls. Under the plan insurance companies will continue to be taxed as in the past. Among other problems facing the state administration in 1935, will be that of replacing the revenues from the utility taxes which, although steadily declining, have constituted an important part of the sources of support for state government. It will be necessary to provide some twenty-five or thirty million dollars from other methods of taxation, if California is to be kept from going further into the red."

NEVADA CITY SCOUT COUNCIL MEETS TONIGHT

The Nevada City Scout Council will meet this evening in the Chamber of Commerce room to hear a report from the financial committee, which has recently been active in collecting annual contributions for scouting. Matters of interest to be discussed will include attendance of the boys of the local troops at the summer camp of Pahatsi and the building of a log lodge for the scouts in Nevada City.

STUDY BY MAIL IS POPULAR IN NEVADA COUNTY

"Study-by-mail" courses most popular with residents of Nevada City, enrolling recently with the University of California Extension Division, are Shakespeare, international law, are appreciation and history of philosophy.

So Professor Leon J. Richardson, University Extension Head announces this week following a survey of the instruction taken by adults in various sections of the state.

Correspondence instruction was first given by the state university in 1913 with a limited number of courses. This year 172 different courses are offered and provisions has been made for more than 5,000 enrollments, states Richardson. Last year 25,834 lesson papers were corrected and criticised and almost 100 persons were engaged in the work of instruction.

Courses most popular in Nevada county include English, law, art and philosophy.

"Through the wide range of Extension Division correspondence courses, an opportunity for continuous development is given to nearly every adult person who is willing to devote part of this spare time to reading and study," states Dr. George A. Smithson, chairman of the department of Correspondence Instruction.

Persons desiring bulletins containing complete descriptions of the courses are asked to write to the University of California Extension Division, 301 California Hall, Berkeley. Enrollments may be made at any time of the year.

New courses made available include radio communication, reading and composition, interior decoration, history of Western Europe, history of the Pacific Coast, journalism, verse writing and the English Bible.

NIEL H. FRANKLIN, NEW OWNER OF MONTEZ CAFE

The Montez Cafe, next to the Holbrook hotel, on Main street, in Grass Valley, has been purchased by Niel H. Franklin, who has transformed it into a modern restaurant with first class facilities for cooking and serving food.

Two years ago Mr. Franklin came to Grass Valley and was with Larry Moore over a year. Last year he took over the Stuart Cafe and gained a large following. He is now established in the Montez Cafe and his excellent cooking and service are rapidly building up an appreciative clientele.

U. C. ALUMNI PROVIDE 26 SCHOLARSHIPS

BERKELEY, June 25.—Twenty-six freshman scholarships to the University of California will be awarded in 13 districts of California this summer by the California Alumni Association, it was announced in Berkeley today.

Mrs. B. A. Swartz, of Clarksburg, has been appointed chairman of the district which includes: Yolo, Colusa, Sutter, Yuba, Nevada, Sacramento, Placer and El Dorado counties.

The responsibility of awarding the two scholarships allocated in this district rests solely with the local scholarship chairman subject to the approval of the central office of the California Alumni Association and of the University Faculty Committee of Scholarships.

The approximate cash value of each scholarship is $180.00. One of them is for a portion of the board and room expenses for a man student at Bowles Hall, dormitory for men on the Berkeley campus of the University, while the other is for a portion of the board and room expenses of a woman student in Myra Hershey Hall, dormitory for women on the Los Angeles campus of the University.

SNIPERS HAPPY IN GOLD PANNING

William Ragon recently returned from a gold sniping trip which took him into the Henness Pass district between Jackson and Camptonville. He said every stream was full of snipers mostly all young people, many being young women and tiny children. In many places the women were working the gravel bars, assisting at panning, running long toms or sluicing.

All those Mr. Ragon met were cheerful and many happy over the delightful out door life this summer weather, but nearly all were just making a living, getting by during this depression time.

One and all seem to feel it beat paying high rents, lights, gas and other expenses of large cities from which most of them come. It is a hard life with a severe test as to individual ability to earn a living and yet these gold seekers make a holiday of it.

E CLAMPUS VITUS PRESENTS PLAQUE TO JUDGE MEEK

CAMPTONVILLE, June 25.—William Bull Meek, well known pioneer of Yuba county, was presented with a bronze plaque by the order of E Clampus Vitus, Redivivus No. 1, of San Francisco. Meek, one of the original members of this noted pioneer order, had planned to take part in the recent festivities at Grass Valley, Marysville, and the institution of the Auburn Chapter, but he is just recovering from a serious illness and deemed it best not to go.

The plaque is a very beautiful piece of bronze work, picturing an old time stage coach, in a mountainous country during a hold up, with the title "In Line of Duty." The following wording is on the plaque, "Presented to William Bull Meek by the members of the ancient and honorable order of E Clampus Vitus, Redivivus No. 1, in appreciation of his long and faithful career as a stage driver on the Yuba Pass and elsewhere in California.

This plaque was prepared by the Wells Fargo Express Company and given the Clampers for presentation to that "Clamper Par Excellence", Bill Meek."

The plaque, with its setting, brings back vivid memories to the old stage driver, and he was very joyous and appreciative of this thoughtfulness of his fellow Clampers.

NEW PLANT INSTALLED BY ROUND MT. PLACERS

ROUND MOUNTAIN, (Nev.),—June 25.—A large plant is being completed on its Round Mountain placers by the Nevada Porphyries Gold Mines at a cost ranging from $40,000 to $50,000. It includes an electric power shovel, double-drum hoist, revolving trommel, conveyors, screens and gold-saving devices. The plant has a rated daily capacity of 1,000 tons of gravel.

It will replace the sluicing plant used for many years, and will require less water although treating a larger tonnage. The company is working over 100 men in its lode mines and milling 200 tons of good ore daily. The value of the monthly yield is reported in excess of $43,000.

The company for several years has been the largest producer of placer gold in Nevada and one of the leading quartz gold yielders.

REHABILITATION FOR PAMLICO MINE IN NEV.

HAWTHORNE, June 25—The La Planta, Pamlico and adjacent claims in the Pamlico district, noted producers of rich gold ore 50 years ago, have been taken under bond and lease by Robert Burns, veteran Nevada operator, and California associates. Rejuvenation of the properties is to be undertaken at once, the 12 mile pipe line repaired and equipment installed.

The La Planta and Pamlico mines are credited with producing some of the richest gold ore ever mined in Nevada. Two shipments in the palmy years of production, aggregating 424 tons, yielded $263,000.

INDIAN VALLEY MINE IS BEING REOPENED

PORTOLA, June 25.—Reopening of the old Indian Valley mine near Greenville, is proceeding rapidly with George I. Barnett, former superintendent of the Tybo mines of the Treadwell-Yukon company, in charge of activities. Old workings will be opened to mining, development of new territory carried forward, and the property will be placed on production as speedily as practicable.

The property is owned by John W. Prentiss, New York capitalist. Considerable rich ore has been produced and strong ledges are said to still exist in the main workings.

BUYING POWER DUE TO DOLES, SAYS SAVANT

LO SANGELES, June 25.—"When in one fashion or another the total long-term debt of the country has been reduced to about half its present figure and the short-term debt has been properly funded and made manageable, then we shall be able to say that the depression is behind us."

Dr. Lewis A. Maverick, economist, told this to a group of alumni of the University of California at Los Angeles, who gathered for a social science conference at a recent "academic homecoming" on the local campus.

"Until that time," he said, "the fixed charges will be so great as to deter enterprises in other than the chaotic agricultural field. Without enterprises there will be no employment. Without employment there will be no wage income. The only purchasing power of the masses will be that resultnig from our doles.

"There can never be a recovery from a depression in a capitalist society unless the enterprisers see that it will be worth their while to employ men and produce goods. Until they anticipate low costs and sustained prices they will not enter upon extraordinary production, and consequently until that time we shall have unemployment and depression.

"Costs must, therefore, be lowered, either through wages or interest charges. If the NRA and the labor organizations are able to keep wages up, that road to low cost is barred and the only way to industrial recovery is through the reduction of interest and principal of debts."

Wallpaper Great Aid in "Remaking" Rooms

Wallpaper is a great aid for barn-like rooms with high ceilings. Here's one recipe for "bringing the ceiling down" and making the total area of the room seem less. Choose a paper having a design in which horizontal lines or patterns predominate and do not cover the walls from the baseboard to the ceiling, but to a point about two feet below the ceiling. Use your molding here, or a wallpaper border.

Then, extend the ceiling paper down to meet the side walls. Thus, you will appear to lower the ceiling. Also, your eyes will follow the horizontal lines in the paper and the room will seem less "tall" to you.

On the other hand, if you are papering a small room with a low ceiling, choose a wallpaper having vertical stripes or patterns to carry the eye up and to add to the apparent height of the walls. And do not "drop" the ceiling, of course.

The best papers for small rooms are those having tiny patterns in light colors. Also, a scenic design will do a lot for the room, lending depth because of its perspective.

When you feel inclined to be a bit hopeless about the architectural drawbacks of your home—don't! Wallpaper can correct myriads of faults if you will give it a chance.—Chicago Tribune.

Fable

When motor cars were not as plentiful as now, a car of fishermen drove through the thinly populated backwoods section where there were no telephones and no newspapers; the radio had not been invented. The party was inching along a lonely rough road and had driven for miles without seeing a soul when they saw a man plowing in the field with a single shovel and his wife hitched to the plow. They stopped and asked their way and the wind blow a newspaper out of the car and in front of the woman. She got scared and ran away and tore up the plow, and it took the man an hour to fix the harness and get to work again.—Independence Examiner.

Eczema on Hands Skin Peeled Off in Pieces

Cuticura Healed

"I was troubled with eczema on my hands for ever so long. I could not put my hands in much water because after I got through I could just peel the skin off in pieces. It would form like a rash and bothered me terribly, burning and itching. My hands were sights and I was ashamed.

"I tried a lot of different remedies that did not help. I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and it helped a lot. I bought more and now my hands are completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. H. S. Hammond, 10 Pleasant St., Hollis-ton, Mass., Aug. 16, 1933.

HISTORICAL CALIFORNIA

THE GRAVE OF RAMONA

(By WNU Service)

In this Indian cemetery on the Cahuilla Indian reservation are buried the mortal remains of the heroine and hero of Helen Hunt Jackson's immortal novel, "Ramona." Ramona's grave is marked by a white cross in the foreground, and is adjoined by that of her full-blooded Indian lover, Alessandro. The resting place of these tragic figures in California's early history is located fifteen miles south of the Ramona Bowl, in Riverside county.

Stream and Trail

(By WNU Service)

The forest service is recommending that the hunting season in District 1½ be shortened 15 days so as to make it agree with the season in District 1; also that the last 15 days be cut off the deer hunting season in District 1¾ making the season September 16 to September 30.

New game refuges located in the Mendocino and Modoc National Forests, where deer have shown a marked decrease, are asked for. These will increase the number of refuges in the national forests of California to 34. It is also recommended that areas burned over by forest fires be closed until the cover has been restored.

From the best information available by forest officers, 93,960 hunters killed 6177 blacktails and 7690 mule deer in the national forests in 1933. Predatory animals are charged with the killing of over 29,000 deer, or twice as many as hunters. Since 1927 the number of hunters in the state has increased 15 per cent, while the number hunting within national forests has doubled.

In general, trout in the streams and lakes of national forests are not decreasing, mainly because of the state's excellent system of hatcheries. Some small streams are recommended by the Forest Service for closure to fishing, and an opening date June 1, instead of May 1, is recommended for a number of lakes in the high country.

Jim Harris, Potrero beekeeper, is cutting notches in his rifle with regularity these days. Within the last 30 days he has killed two mountain lions and the only brown bear killed in San Diego County in five years.

The bear, a female that had just weaned her cubs, was shot by Harris and a neighbor, George A. Smith, after she had visited Smith's apiary and had wrecked all but four of his 25 bee colonies. She had a weakness, like all bears, for honey. The animal weighed 220 pounds and supplied meat for Smith and Harris for several days.

George D. Nordenholt, director of natural resources, in a reply to some recent statements asserts that the fisn and game commission will never be wholly successful until it gets the cooperation of all sportsmen. He stressed the importance of each sportsman abiding by the fish and game laws and if violators are seen, to report each case and to make it part of his duty to further the cause of conservation.

At an altitude of 10,000 feet, south of Mammoth Lakes are the Laurel Lakes, the home of some of the fightingest steelhead trout in the High Sierras. Fishermen must pack four and one-half miles to get in there.

The Lake Mary pack train has opened Duck Lake Pass, which gives access to many wonderful creeks and lakes in the headwaters of the San Joaquin River. By this route the following waters and species of trout may be found:

Duck Lake, golden trout; Purple Lake, rainbow; Lake Virginia, golden; Fish Creek, rainbow; Lakes of the Lone Indian, eastern brook and golden; Purple, Minnow and Shadow Creeks, and the San Joaquin River, rainbow. In the lakes, the spinner has been found a very good lure; flies of the gray and brown hackle type are the best in the streams.

News Oddities

(By WNU Service)

Los Angeles—In one of the most unusual ceremonies witnessed here in many years, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hamilton Spearman had their marriage vows of 50 years ago repeated in the Church of the Blessed Sacrament in Hollywood. A son, now a priest, officiated as their grandchildren grouped about them. Spearman is a well-known author.

Cottonwood, Shasta County—Violins in good condition and believed to be of excellent make, were found in the graves uncovered by prospectors five miles west of here in the hills recently. The graves are believed to be those of Indians. The instruments were supposedly taken from massacred early pioneers by Indians who carried the devil-music makers to their graves with them as a token.

Pasadena—The mystery of why a mule has no offspring may be solved by the California Institute of Technology in a series of experiments, for which a biologist is being sent to Alaska to find some new kinds of flies. Cross-breeding of certain flies produces sterility.

Santa Rosa—Santa Rosa's "grand old lady," Mrs. Louisa Marie Tyler Trowbridge, celebrated a century of life recently at a public reception. At 100 she is still alert. She reads regularly the daily newspapers, magazines and the Bible and tends to her own business affairs. She plans to vote at the August primary.

Long Beach—For 30 days this city had no ordinances, every existing municipal law having been repealed unintentionally. But officials and newspapermen kept the secret and on June 7 a corrective ordinance, passed 30 days ago, went into effect, restoring the ordinances.

Costa Mesa—A valuable engraved nugget ring made by hand in the early gold rush days, lost 20 years ago by the late J. H. Rochester of the aristocratic Rochester family, was unearthed recently by James O. Tallman, while he was spading his vegetable garden on a portion of what was the former Rochester estate. The ring is extremely valuable

Mining & Oil

(By WNU Service)

O. H. Kirkwood and C. L. Cooper are planning to recover the tailings of the old May Lundy mine which was worked back in 1912 in the Mono Lake country. These tailings lie on the floor of Mono Lake, in 20 feet of water, and are said to be good for $6 per ton. Probably to prevent high-grading, the original locater of this property built a cabin at the entrance of the mine's tunnel. All of the tailings he wheeled through his kitchen, in a wheel-barrow, and dumped off the back porch into the lake. The tailings slid down the slope into the lake and have since become somewhat solidified. The big job is now to get the tailings out of the water and back into the mill.

Resumption of comprehensive work at the old Globe Consolidated mine in the Dedrick field of Trinity County, is soon to start. Salt Lake capitalists recently took a bond and lease on the old producer, which yielded close to $1,000,000 20 years ago, and have arranged for vigorous development of new ground.

George C. Arrowsmith and associates have leased the placer properties extending along the Feather River, near Oroville, and are preparing to place the old serial dragline dredge in commission. The claims are estimated to contain 10,000,000 cubic yards of gold-bearing gravel.

Miners, working on Elephant Hill, were responsible recently for two new finds which are reported to have uncovered gold-bearing veins in the Mojave district. A three-foot vein of sulphide ore running $20 per ton on the 200-foot level was found. A two-foot vein was found in the Red Hills district with the ore running about $13 to the ton. The vein has not thinned in the first 200 feet, it was said.

A wildcat well for Mono County to be known as Alameda No. 1, and to be drilled by Fred Bauchwitz, heads the list of 11 new wells started last week. The Edison area got two, and the Mesa field in Santa Barbara got two.

Declining gas pressure and water intrusion are two incentives to push new drilling. The thought also is that the supply now is hardly greater than the demand. Stocks on hand of refinable oil in this state, for example, are only 35,500,500 barrels, which would not last many days if called upon to satisfy a deficiency

WOW!

Hub—Where's that new dress you bought? I haven't seen you wearing it yet.

Wife—Huh! I saw our neighbor, Mrs. DeSnob, wearing one just like it, so I gave it to the next door laundress and made her wear it while hanging up the clothes so the snooty thing could see her with it on.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Not Her Worry

"But," said the friend who had dropped in from out of town, "won't your wife be sore at you for bringing me home to dinner without letting her know in advance?"

"Heck, no!" he replied, "I always pick up the makings for dinner at the delicatessen on the way home, and the kids and I get it on the table before she blows in from the bridge club."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Stop That Squeak

"Wilfred! Wilfred!" whispered Mrs. Jones, excitedly, "There's a mouse in the bedroom."

Wilfred sat up in bed and looked sleepily at his wife. "Well, what about it?" he groaned.

"I can hear it squeaking," she said.

"Well, d'yu want me to get out and oil it, or something?" he snapped. —Exchange.

Generosity

"Is your boy Josh going back to college?"

"I'm not sure," answered Farmer Corntossel. "Josh seems to think that if a college professor knows anything worth tellin' he'll rush to the radio and give it to you free."

Two Sides

"There are two sides to every argument."

"That's true," said Senator Sorghum. "But an argument is like a coat. There's a wrong side and a right side."—Washington Star.

Noisy With It

Pete—You had soup for dinner today.

Bill—Who told you?

Pete—Nobody; I was passing your house while the family was at work on it.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

AWAITING DECISION

Mrs. W. H. writes: "Bobby was attending summer school at St. Monica and was dawdling along in that direction one morning when a friend of his mother came along.

"'Which is it today?' she asked. 'Is it school or fishing?'

"'I'm not sure,' hesitated Bobby. 'I'm just fighting with my conscience.'"—Boston Transcript.

The Stolen Rope

"Have you a copy of 'The Stolen Rope'?" inquired a visitor to a music seller.

"I am afraid I don't know of such a song."

"Why, it goes like this:" And the customer hummed the tune.

"Why, you mean 'The Lost Chord!'" said the assistant.

"Ah, that's it!"—Toronto Globe.

A Perfect Gentleman

"What's your idea of a gentleman farmer?"

"He's a person," answered Farmer Corntossel, "who is so well fixed that he can waste profanity on a golf ball instead of on a mule."

Too Busy

"Ever study political economy?"

"No," replied Senator Sorghum. "If the people out my way caught me sitting down to read a lot o' books they'd think I was neglecting my job."

A Dreamer

"What is a debtor, pa?"

"A man who owes money."

"And what is a creditor?"

"The man who thinks he's going to get it."—Boston Transcript.

75 Miles Per Hour

"High speed motors, of 1932-1934, upon examination are showing more than ordinary upper cylinder and piston ring wear," says, Fred C. Joy, of Joy and Company, of Sacramento's exclusive motor oil and grease distributor.

Few motorists realize thea many well-known motor oils, both western and 100 per cent Penn., now offered for sale were designed to meet motor requirements, when a motor car traveling at 40 or 45 miles per hour was said to be "burning up the road." Today cruising speeds of 60 to 75 miles per hour are commonly accepted motor speeds.

High compression motors and all late models are now known as such, require motor oils of much higher heat and pressure resisting specifications than formerly, to assure proper upper cylinder lubrication. High compression motor compelled the appearance of anti-knock gasolines, but as yet motor oils, generally, are far behind performance.

No one oil refining company excells in all its products. Joy and Company, being an independent motor oil distributing organization, are in a position to select only those motor oils and greases they know to possess the heat-resisting requirements developed by high speed, high compression motors.

Joy and Company have a Pyroil Treated 100 per cent Pure Parafine-base motor oil that cannot be surpassed for assured upper cylinder and bearing lubrication at high speed. Ford V-8 motors thrive on it. Eleven out of the first twelve racing cars to finish Indianapolis Speedway Races on Memorial Day, used Pyroil Treated Motor Oil. A 100 per cent Pennsylvania Sharples DeWaxed motor oil, with high heat resisting specifications, is offered. (Specifications supplied on request).

Joy and Company also feature an Eastern 100 per cent Parafine-base Oil with a carbon residue rating of less than 1 per cent. Think of it! Many Pennsylvania oils have an 8 per cent carbon residu rating. Low carbon content oils are known to tractor and truck operators, as the oils that take the severest beating on hard pulls.

To acquaint "out of town" motorists, tractor and truck owners, with these various types of motor oils, Joy and Company, are offering the following low prices on "Gallon" "Oil Change," and "Five-gallon Quantities." Bring your container.

Gallon 5-Qt. oil change 5-gallons
Pyroil Treated (SAE)
Parafine Base (30-40) 95c gal., $1.19 5-quart oil change, $4.50 5-gal.
